

Prof. Dr. Christian Rolfo, MD, PhD, MBAh (Cordoba, Argentina)

Prof. Rolfo is board certified oncologist by University of Milan, Italy; and PhD in Clinical and Experimental Oncology (thesis on EGFR). He has worked at Spanish Group for Lung Cancer, with Prof. Rafael Rosell, actively involved in studies of molecular biology and clinical research in NSCLC. He has completed his training in Phase I program at MD Anderson, Texas, USA. He is the Professor in Oncology and Head of Phase I – Early Clinical Trails at Antwerp University Hospital in Belgium, and Professor at the Join International PhD in Experimental Oncology at Palermo University, Italy.

Prof. Rolfo was also appointed in 2012 Director of Clinical Trails Management Program in Oncology and Director of “Investigational Cancer Therapeutics Fellowship and Drug Development: Clinical and Experimental” at Antwerp University Hospital.

He is working in Translational Research & Drug Development. His research is focused on Liquid Biopsies in Lung Cancer (exosomes and ctDNA), new drug development and biomarkers discovery in Lung Cancer.

He is the author of numerous papers published in worldwide prestigious journals including New England Journal of Medicine, Lancet Oncology, Oncotarget, JCO, Lung Cancer, among others. Prof. Rolfo is currently part of the educational committee of IALSC, Scientific Board Member of ESO and the membership committee of ESMO. He is currently Deputy Editor of CROH and in editorial board of Lung Cancer, TLCR, BJMO among others.